

The 2nd Multicultural Co-creation Society Forum

A dialogue about the future we are creating together

Admission Free

This forum will explore the concept of a "multicultural co-creation society," where individuals with diverse cultural backgrounds and different ways of thinking work together to build a society. How should we approach the transition "from coexistence to co-creation"? As one initiative to deepen understanding, we will be holding the "2nd Multicultural Co-creation Society Forum in Izumo," following on from last year. This year's main theme is "The future, we create together." This forum will feature a keynote speech and group sessions on the theme of "Foreigners and Japanese people working together towards the future." At this forum, we hope to create a "dialogical space" where citizens from diverse countries and regions can respect each other, embrace their diversity, and work together—both foreigners and Japanese—to move towards the future. Participation is free, so please join us.

Nady's Profile

Born in Iran in 1984. In 1991, Nady came to Japan with her family, whose parents were migrant workers, and grew up in the suburbs of the Tokyo metropolitan area while overstaying their visas. She attended public school from the third grade of elementary school, and while in high school, she and her family obtained special permission to reside in Japan, thus acquiring residency status. After graduating from university, she worked for a company in Tokyo and is currently a mother of two children. Her favorite Starbucks drink is a grande-sized all-milk chai latte.
